

THE SCENE AI THE BRAND BIBLE

Who we are, how we sound, how we look. Every decision in one place.

If the master build is HOW to build it, this is WHO we are while we build it. Anything that goes out with our name on it – a post, an ad, a PDF, a DM, a cover – answers to this document.

1 • THE FOUNDER

Destyni Triplett, RN – a nurse who builds businesses on systems, not luck.

She started in 2017 doing lashes out of her home – no studio, no team, just a client in a chair and the decision to get better every week. She went back and finished nursing school, became an RN in 2020, and kept building the beauty business at the same time. Nine years later: over 1,000 clients serviced, 250+ women trained, a nationwide certification brand built from that same chair. She has already run this exact play once – take a real skill, systemize it, teach it, build a business from it. THE SCENE AI is the second time she's run that play, not the first attempt.

Nursing is where the brand's real edge comes from. Nurses do not do something once and hope it holds – they build a protocol that produces the same outcome every time. THE SCENE AI points that same instinct at AI content: the rest of this niche sells one-off prompts. We sell CONTINUITY – the same face, the same body, the same world, episode after episode. Consistency is a clinical value, aimed at a creative problem. That's the whole differentiator in one sentence, and it's not a slogan – it's where she actually comes from.

Her anchor: Habakkuk 2:2 – "write the vision and make it plain." Not decoration. The actual operating instruction: she writes it down, then builds until it exists.

2 • THE BRAND IN ONE BREATH

THE SCENE AI teaches creators to build AI characters and run them like a series – him or her or both, locked faces, real skin, episode after episode, all from a phone. One lead first. Then the cast grows.

- The one-liner: One character. A whole world. (The entry move, not a cap – the world holds a full cast. Lead first, then co-stars, then the second lead. Like any series.)
- The three moves (the plain-English pitch, one level up from the system itself): Create the Character. Direct the Scene. Build the World. The Production Blueprint's four zones are how those three moves actually run, step by step.
- The tagline: Create cinematic content. Build your digital world.
- The promise: Everything is copy and paste – simple enough for a fifth grader.
- The feeling: Netflix production school meets a creator operating system. Members don't take a course. They run a studio.

3 • WHO WE TALK TO

Two audiences, one system. We build for both without changing the product – only the doorway changes.

Segment A – The Creator. Building an audience, wants to be recognizable. Any niche – beauty, fitness, music, real estate. Him AND her, always. They're not engineers and don't want to be: they want a system to follow in order, and they want their character to look REAL – real skin texture, baby hairs, culturally accurate styling. That last part is not a feature, it's the flag: nobody else in this niche builds for them on purpose.

Segment B – The Business Owner. Marketing a real company, wants a brand face they own. Salons and med spas, boutiques and e-commerce, real estate agents, restaurants, home service and care providers, consultants, local businesses with no content team. Their pain: a photoshoot costs hundreds every time they need new content, they've been recycling the same booked-model photos for a year, they can't keep up with every promo and season, and their competitor's page looks like a magazine while theirs looks like a phone.

The reframe that makes this brand bigger than it looks: a creator builds a character to become recognizable. A business owner builds a character to let the customer see themselves in it – the woman in the chair, the buyer at the closing table, the client on the couch. Same product either way (Character First, Continuity, Camera Bible, the outfit and hair packs are exactly what a business owner needs too) – only the framing moves, from "build your following" to "build your brand's face." We already reach this segment through Q1 of the join questions and the visible WORK WITH ME page; a dedicated ad angle and DM script for this segment is future work, not built yet.

What turns both segments off: hype, guru energy, vague promises, and anything that reads like it was written by someone who hasn't actually built what they're selling.

4 • THE WORLD WE SPEAK FROM

Everything in this brand is a production. Not a metaphor we visit – the world we live in:

- Members are creators and directors. Never students. Never users.
- They don't make videos. They produce episodes.
- They don't post. They release.
- Characters aren't created. They are CAST – the lead first, then the co-star, then the second lead. A world can hold a full cast; every new face gets its own MASTER and its own lock.
- Nothing is chosen or finished. It's LOCKED – the cast is locked, the story is locked, the world is locked.
- The system is THE PRODUCTION BLUEPRINT: four zones – 🧑 CASTING, 📝 STORY DEVELOPMENT, 🎬 PRODUCTION DESIGN, 📺 PRODUCTION + RELEASE.
- Inside Zone 2, directing a single episode runs on the S.C.E.N.E. Method – five blocks, left to right: Story, Cast, Environment, Now Build, End on your stamp.
- Progress is a film career: Extra to Studio Head.
- Every lesson ends the same way: "📺 That's a wrap – mark complete when..."

5 • THE NAME SYSTEM

Thing	Name	Never call it
The brand	THE SCENE AI (all caps in display)	Scene AI, TSA
The community	THE SCENE AI on Skool	the group, the course
The $9 shelf	BUILD YOUR CHARACTER - Modules 01-04	the free stuff, the basics
The $97 unlock	THE WORLD BUILDER	the upsell, the paid tier
The system doc	The Production Blueprint	the road map, the workflow
The zone map	The Creator OS Map	the diagram
Monthly content	Drops (Drop 001, 002...)	updates, new content
The character's photo ID	the MASTER (one per character - every cast member gets their own)	profile pic, avatar
The reference set	DNA batch, production references	reference images
A piece of content	an episode, a scene	a post, a video
The DFY arm	WORK WITH ME - I'm an AI Creative Director	services, freelancing

Naming rules: modules are numbered 01-12 (05A/05B and 06A/06B split her/his). Numbers never repeat across shelves - the World Builder CONTINUES the shelf, it never re-sells what members own. Vaults hold collections (Hook Vault, Prompt Vault, Caption Vault). Blueprints hold systems (Production, Reference, Comment, Viral Story).

6 • THE TWO VOICES

Voice 1 - THE FUNNEL (outside the paid door): ads, About page, AutoDM, IG captions. Sells hard but honest. Short punches. Emoji structure (✅ ❌ 🚫). Price math ($9, $0.30 a day). The guarantee in every pitch. Proof is views, comments, and cost-of-scene - never income claims.

Voice 2 - THE SET (inside, members paid): classroom, lessons, rank wall, community posts. The funnel is over - "free," "get," and "offer" don't exist in here. We talk to the director they're becoming. Warm, direct, second person. Selling voice exists in exactly two places inside: the locked World Builder tile and WORK WITH ME - closed doors are allowed to sell.

Both voices: sixth grade or under (we test it – current average is grade 3.9). Short sentences. Big claims backed by something you can screenshot. Hard system words always arrive with a plain translation: "Continuity – Part 2 starts one second after Part 1 ended."

7 • THE LANGUAGE TABLE (the words, decided)

We never say	We always say
student, user	creator, director
idea	concept (in system copy; "story ideas" fine in casual)
character created	character CAST
look / story / location chosen	locked
make a video	produce an episode
post it	release it
next video	next episode
reference images	production references
checklist	production checklist
road map	the Production Blueprint
workflow	the production pipeline
shortlisted, leverage, optimize	(jargon – plain words only)

Glossary of terms we own: the MASTER (the locked face photo – their ID card forever) · DNA batch (the reference photo set) · Identity Lock (the face that never changes) · the drop (monthly: 30 scenes, 10 looks, one Master Scene) · the [BRACKETS] (the fill-in slots in every prompt) · zones 1–4 (the blueprint stages) · LOCKED (a checkpoint passed) · "That's a wrap" (lesson complete).

8 • COPY RULES (non-negotiable)

1. No em dashes in customer-facing copy. Hyphens only.
2. Emoji kit. Brand marks: 🎬 🎥 🔒 ⚡ 🌐 👁️ · Structure: ✅ ❌ 🌟 !! 👉 · Banned: 🚫 💰 📊 🧵 📁, and gendered decoration (👉 ✨ 🥰) in brand copy – the brand is him AND her.
3. No income claims, ever. Not in ads, not in captions, not in DMs. Our proof: view counts, "is she real" comments, what a scene cost to make.
4. No boss-babe framing, no fake lifestyle flexing. No rented cars, no staged wealth. Credibility comes from finished, postable work – not a performed lifestyle.
5. No fake scarcity. $9 flat until 50,000 members. The only pressure line allowed: "The price goes up as we grow." A specific number that never comes true is a screenshot that burns the brand.
6. Prompts are sacred. Copy inside prompt blocks never gets reworded for style – members paste it into AI tools.

7. Reading level is a spec, not a vibe. Member-facing copy tests at sixth grade or under before it ships.
8. Every lesson closes with the wrap line and a checkable action: "🎬 That's a wrap - mark complete when [something they did]."
9. Never state a business fact we haven't verified - a trademark, a credential, a number. If unsure, leave it out rather than guess.

9 • VISUAL IDENTITY

The palette - dark set, neon lights:

Color	Hex	Job
Jet black	#000000	The background. Always. The brand lives at night.
Electric cyan	#00E5FF	Accent 1 - system, structure, "follow this"
Vibrant magenta	#F600A2	Accent 2 - the brand's heart: locks, banners, heat
Acid lime	#C6FF00	Accent 3 - energy, GO signals, START HERE
Silver/chrome	#C0C3C7	Titles - brushed-metal headline treatment
Off-white	#F7F7F5	Body text on black

Accents cycle cyan, then magenta, then lime across documents and UI. Magenta owns the locks and the money moments. Lime owns beginnings. (Flag: an earlier identity brief named only black, silver, cyan and magenta as the locked palette, with no lime. Every shipped asset - all 19 module PDFs, every rank badge, the roadmap graphic - already runs lime as the third accent. Lime stays as documented here unless Destyni says cut it; changing it means re-touching every rendered PDF.)

Type: Poppins everywhere - ExtraBold for display titles (the brushed-chrome treatment), Bold/SemiBold for headings and labels (tracked-out caps for labels), Regular for body. JetBrains Mono for module references and technical chips (MODULE 07, BONUS 01). Emoji render in Noto Emoji inside documents.

The logo lockup: "THE" small and tracked above SCENE in chrome + AI in magenta, with the tagline beneath. Corner brackets (cyan/magenta) frame covers like a viewfinder.

Art direction (every image, one sentence): a cinematic still, shot on a film set at night - deep black, one centered subject, neon rim light in cyan and magenta with a lime edge, ultra-photorealistic, premium, minimal.

Cover rules (Skool tiles, 1460x752): either NO text (pure emblem - the 9 rank badges) or ONE huge centered chrome word (the 5 sections). Small text and edge text die on mobile. One centered subject with breathing room survives every crop. Spell-check every AI generation. Locked tiles get Skool's own lock overlay - never draw locks into art.

PDF design language: black pages, chrome titles, ghost numerals behind cover titles, the accent cycle per document, progress ticks (PART 07 OF 19), corner brackets, magenta NEXT STEP banners, code panels for prompts with a COPY THIS header.

10 • POSITIONING (for pitch decks, ad briefs, media kits – not classroom copy)

Positioning statement: For creators who want content people recognize, THE SCENE AI is the operating system for building consistent AI characters and cinematic worlds – because the difference between random pictures and a real brand is a character you can repeat.

What makes this different:

- Everyone else teaches how to make an image. We teach how to build a world.
- Everyone else sells prompts. We sell a named method – the S.C.E.N.E. Method, the Production Blueprint.
- Everyone else's proof is a screenshot. Ours is a finished, serialized body of work.
- We are not competing on price or trend speed. We compete on depth, taste, and a system that holds up past the first post.

The vibe, one paragraph: dark, cinematic, expensive, and calm. A director's monitor glowing in a black room – silver type, a flash of cyan, a flash of magenta. Feels like a film studio, not a course. No clutter, no stock energy, no screaming arrows.

This section is reference language for pitches and ad briefs. It runs above the sixth-grade reading target on purpose – never paste it directly into classroom or About-page copy without simplifying first.

11 • THE LADDER (offers, and how we talk about money)

Rung	Price	Voice rule
THE SCENE AI membership	$9/mo, locks for life	"Under $0.30 a day." Guarantee in every pitch. No trial.
THE WORLD BUILDER	$97 once, in-app	Sells only on its own locked tile. "When your character is born – this opens."
CHARACTER, DELIVERED	$297	Invoice only. DM BUILT.
THE EPISODE PACK	$697	Invoice only. DM BUILT.
THE PREMIERE	$997	Invoice only. DM BUILT.

Money voice: we minimize our price ($0.30 a day) and prove our cost ("this scene cost $4 to make") – we never promise their income. The 7-day money-back guarantee is real and appears wherever the price does.

(This is the live ladder, sold entirely through Skool. There is no separate storefront, no standalone Stan product, and no "planned" membership tier waiting to launch – THE SCENE AI membership above IS the recurring tier, live now. If you see the ladder described any other way in an older document, this page is the correct one.)

12 • THE RANKS (the career ladder)

Extra, Day Player, Supporting, Co-Star, Lead, Showrunner, Director, Producer, Studio Head. Points are likes from other members – the ladder rewards good episodes, not spam. Every rank speaks in the world's voice ("You're on the call sheet"), and the top three pay real prizes (50% off DFY · free lifetime · the World Builder, free). Rank badges: metallic emblems, no text.

13 • WHAT WE NEVER DO

- Never a different face every post – in our content OR our copy. The brand is consistency; we are the proof. (More characters is not more faces for one character: every cast member is locked, separately.)
- Never cap the world at one character. The lead-first rule is about FOCUS, not limits – the second character is a sequel move, made after the first one is locked and releasing.
- Never guru-core: no rented Lambos, no income screenshots, no 🚀.
- Never boss-babe framing or fake lifestyle flexing (see Copy Rule 4).
- Never "AI influencer girlfriend" energy. She's a series lead, not a fantasy. He exists too, always.
- Never punch down at members' niches. Every niche gets the same respect and the same system.
- Never break the fourth wall of the production world inside the classroom. Outside (ads), we happily say "she's not real" – that IS the hook. Inside, she's the talent and the member is the director.
- Never spend the business's rent money. The brand is self-funded and says so out loud – "built from a phone" includes the budget.
- Never state a fact about the business we haven't verified (see Copy Rule 9) – a stale funnel, an old storefront, an unconfirmed trademark. Wrong facts in brand material cost more to unwind than they saved by skipping the check.
